The Covenant

A poem based on John Wesley's prayer for the Methodist Covenant Service

I no longer belong solely for myself, but to you, entirely.

Set your will alight in me; may it illumine my way,

Place me amongst whoever you desire;

Set my head and heart and hands to doing;

Set me to compassion; to suffer alongside the contemporary crucified;

Let me be immersed in your word and work and mission, for you;

Or let me be passed by, marginalised and maligned, for you;

Approved and admired for you or abused and abased, for you;

Let me be overflowing the brim, let me be exhausting the dregs,

Let me have all that I desire, let me be no-thing;

To be emptied of all possessiveness and earthly acclamations, for you;

With an unshackled and Godward-looking heart I surrender all that I have, to you

To choose your delight or disapproval, of me.

And now, most glorious and blessed God,

Creator, Redeemer and much-needed Sustainer,

You belong to me and I belong to you.

Let it be.

And the covenant now consented aloud on earth,

Confirm it sealed in heaven.

Amen.
